The Program reflects the vision of the University regarding its cultural role, social function and cultural heritage rooted not only in man's material life, but also in the manifestations of the human mind and its capacities for transcendent thought.

Objectives

Within the context of the University's vision, the Cultural Studies Program seeks to attain the following objectives:

- To introduce students to foundational and influential texts, thinkers and ideas from a range of humanities and social sciences disciplines, cultures and historical periods in order to understand the manifestations and achievements of human thought, civilizations and cultures.
- To develop a deeper understanding and appreciation of the power of the human spirit, its richness and diversity, and its capacities, both positive and negative, in all forms of cultural life, particularly in the Mediterranean region.
- To locate students within the historical, philosophical, scientific, aesthetic and religious dimensions of cultures to see the interconnectedness and interdisciplinarity within these various fields in order to extend knowledge and its application beyond the boundaries of local contexts.
- To graduate students with the desire, confidence and intellectual tools required to read, think and write about diverse cultural phenomena and issues in rational, critically informed ways as the basis for life-long learning.

Learning Outcomes

Students who complete this Program will be able to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the diverse elements of various cultures and histories, and an ability to relate them to one another.
- Identify the persistence of specific cultural elements and themes across historical and geographical boundaries.
- Undertake research related to cultural issues in order to critically evaluate them within the context of human knowledge, science, religion and art.
- Articulate the challenges to and potentials of ancient and contemporary cultures through a demonstrated knowledge of and critical engagement with their historical, religious, cultural and political forces.
- Use appropriate theories, analytical methods and technologies to access, analyze and evaluate academic materials related to the Program's courses.
- Understand and articulate the importance and influence of diversity within and among Mediterranean cultures as a way of comprehending social change, tension and conflict.
- Effectively communicate critical judgments, both oral and written, concerning the various sources of human thought, religion and culture.

•Be purposeful, independent learners and thinkers who have developed the basis for engaged citizenship and the ability to integrate specialized components of human knowledge into larger, cultural contexts.

Teaching Methodology

The Cultural Studies Program follows a teaching methodology that is based upon close reading and discussion of texts and other sources of knowledge, and active student participation in their own learning. Courses may include some introductory lectures when necessary. A team of Instructors is responsible for the teaching methodology in each stream. The overall Program will be under the supervision of a Coordinator, assigned by the Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences, who will ensure the coherence of course contents and the vision of the Program.
