SAINT JOHN OF DAMASCUS
INSTITUTE OF THEOLOGY
INTRODUCTION

Since its foundation in 1970, the Saint John of Damascus Institute of Theology was defined as a center for pastoral formation and theological research. The Institute sets guidelines for theological thought in the Antiochian Patriarchate and provides pastors with both traditional and modern approaches and methods that help them in serving the Church and witnessing to the world.

The research spectrum of the PhD Program covers the main areas of academic studies in theology: biblical exegesis, dogmatic theology, patristics, Church history, pastoral theology and interreligious studies. These areas are bound together through a common approach based on the Antiochian Orthodox Christian heritage and a pastoral concern of modern society.

Having built a competent faculty working for the advancement of Orthodox Christian scholarship, the Institute of Theology has created a network of collaboration with theological institutions and scholars around the world, through joint agreements aiming at fostering theological endeavors. This enables the program to provide concrete opportunities to produce valuable multilingual research, to equip the community with new generations of qualified experts, and to create a forum of exchange for scholars coming from different Orthodox backgrounds.

The Balamand University has always radiated faith and knowledge to the Antiochian communities all over the world. Thus this program has come to extend the Balamand’s mission to the highest levels of academic talent and erudition. In partnership with the Institute of Theology, the Antiochian House of Orthodox Studies (AHOS) accredited by ATS, and based in the Antiochian Village of the Antiochian Archdiocese of North America, plays a vital role in fulfilling the witness of the Church of Antioch and its mission in the world.

MISSION

The PhD Program at the Institute of Theology provides concrete opportunities to produce valuable multilingual research, to equip the community with new generations of qualified experts and Church leaders, and to create, through a network of collaboration with Orthodox and non-Orthodox theological institutions and scholars, a forum of academic and scholarly exchange. The PhD Program covers a wide research spectrum highlighting the Antiochian Orthodox Christian heritage and dealing with the contemporary theological challenges facing modern man.

OBJECTIVES

The PhD Program seeks to:

1. Equip candidates with advanced Orthodox theological scholarship.
2. Qualify researchers to lead advanced academic theological research.
4. Develop in PhD candidates high standards of ethics and professionalism.
5. Equip candidates with necessary skills and tools to teach in universities.
6. Foster the interrelationship between theological research and the pastoral work of the Church.
7. Lead an active interaction with the research community worldwide on issues of Eastern Christianity.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

Upon completing the PhD process, graduates shall be able to:

a. Communicate in academic research the Ethos and Tradition of the Orthodox Church.
b. Use pioneering technology tools for the advancement of research in the theological field.
c. Conduct advanced academic research on the different sources of Christianity in the East.
d. Study and analyze primary theological sources.
e. Provide the scholarly community with critical editions and studies of manuscripts.
f. Translate primary theological sources into Modern Languages.
g. Collaborate in the scholarly debates on issues related to various theological fields.
h. Contextualize theological discourse in a pluralistic world.
i. Assess the needs of the Church in a world of rapid transformational change.
j. Relate theological thought to the practical pastoral reality of the Church.
k. Dialogue with new ideological trends according to the needs of the Church.
l. Contribute to inter-confessional and interfaith dialogues and enrich them with scholarly research.

NAYLA NAHAS

Nayla Nahas (PhD in Psychology) is an Associate Professor in the Department of Psychology at the University of Balamand in Lebanon and a trained school and developmental psychologist. For over 20 years, Dr. Nahas has been researching and teaching educational and psychosocial processes that influence children’s development, adaptation and well-being. Her research focuses on exploring the relational, systemic, and “ecosystemic” processes underlying academic performance and students’ adaptation and well-being. She also focuses on the crucial role of family functioning in explaining children’s development and adaptation. Dr. Nahas utilizes surveys, case studies, interviews, focus groups, and functional observation methodologies and develops multiple assessment strategies and tools to explore both qualitatively and quantitatively the basic intra-psychic and interpersonal mechanisms involved in children’s and adolescents’ adaptation. In her research, she particularly looks into attachment strategies, stress and coping strategies, and self-esteem and self-efficacy processes in relationship with identity construction. Her research informed many of the actions and training of trainers and educators that she participated in with local communities to allow the planning, organization and implementation of interventions that focus on school or family education or reeducation. Academically Dr. Nahas participated in the reform of the curriculum of both the Education and Psychology Departments and introduced psychoeducational and psychosocial components to both curricula. She also served on many university committees (Orientation, Administrative, and curriculum committees). Dr. Nahas also served as the chair of the Department of Psychology from September 2015 to December 2019 and from March 2023 until now.

She is now leading or co-leading several research projects, as well as master’s and PhD studies related to the adaptation of marginalized populations (delinquency, refugees) in Lebanon, including the examination of the role of war exposure, daily hassles, identity threat, attachment strategies, loss of meaning as well as the efficiency of many implemented interventions as well as the translation to Arabic and the adaptation of assessment tools of the attachment and the theory of mind.

BIOGRAPHIES

HIS GRACE BISHOP ROMANOS AL HANNAT

His Grace Bishop Romanos Al Hannat is presently an Associate Professor of Church Music. He has been working in the field of music teaching since 1994. In 2003, he received a Diploma in Byzantine Music from the Greek National Conservatoire in Athens, and in 2011, he obtained a PhD in Byzantine Music from the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki. He was the first in the Middle East to obtain a doctorate in Byzantine music, and he remains the only scholar to conduct studies about Byzantine music application in the Arabic language. Bishop Romanos joined the St. John of Damascus Institute of Theology in 2014, and since then he has been teaching in the undergraduate and graduate programs. He has also taken part in numerous musical and non-musical conferences as well as in their preparations. Moreover, Bishop Romanos is a visiting professor at some European universities, teaching students in Bachelor’s and Master’s programs. At the Institute of Theology, Bishop Romanos has been the coordinator of the Byzantine Music Program, the only program of its kind in the region’s Arabic-speaking universities to date. The academic content of the courses taught by Bishop Romanos is distinguished by a blend of theory and practice, as the practical experience that dates back to 1814 continues to be practical and educational hitherto. Bishop Romanos could transmit this practical application to Bachelor’s and Master’s students on a university level. In his research, His Grace places special emphasis on the potential of practical application of ecclesiastical music on a larger scale due to its richness and great ease of use, compared to all existing oriental music types.

In the second year, the candidate follows two tutorials and begins with the redaction of the dissertation. The third year is entirely dedicated to the redaction of the dissertation.

RULES AND REGULATIONS
1. The PhD Program is equivalent in length to three years of study.
2. All candidates are required to complete course work (12 credits seminars – 6 credits tutorials) in the first two years.
3. Candidates for the PhD degree shall satisfactorily complete work amounting to 42 credits distributed as follows:
   - 12 credits in four offered seminars in different theological disciplines
   - 6 credits in two tutorials focusing on the topic of the dissertation
   - 24 credits for the dissertation
4. The academic year is made up of two semesters.
5. The PhD candidate must meet the standards for academic progress, defined as:
   - Having a cumulative grade point average of at least B (80/100) in the Program
   - Minimum passing grade B- (75/100) in all courses
   - Not exceeding maximum absence (10%)
   - Continuous effort in research
6. The following grading scheme is adopted for reporting final course grades:

DISSERTATION CONCEPT

1. DESCRIPTION
The doctoral dissertation is an unpublished academic work, culminating years of post-graduate, guided, independent and personal original research. The results must be supported by critical study and theoretical arguments obtained with scientific methods. A dissertation must have the general purposes:

• To generate scholarly valid and reliable conclusions
• To provide advancement in knowledge in the field of specialization

The PhD candidate needs to defend successfully his/her doctoral dissertation to receive his/her PhD degree.

2. APPROVAL OF DETAILED PROPOSAL
By the end of the first year, the PhD candidate submits a detailed dissertation proposal, related to the faculty’s active research areas. The description of the academic content of the PhD project should include: topic definition, hypothesis, methods of research, literature review, any empirical research planned, bibliography, etc.

3. SUPERVISION

a) APPOINTMENT OF SUPERVISOR:
Upon considering the Application for Admission and the Dissertation Proposal, the Academic Committee recommends to the Dean a Professor to supervise the PhD project. The Dean considers the recommendation for approval. The supervisor should be a recognized researcher in the relevant research area and a member of the UOB faculty at the level of Full Professor or Associate Professor.

b) SUPERVISOR’S RESPONSIBILITIES:
The supervisor has overall responsibilities to mentor the progress of the PhD candidate’s research project and the writing of the PhD dissertation with a view to ensuring completion as required. The supervisor shall prepare a PhD plan at the start of the project together with the candidate. He shall:

• Evaluate the progress of the PhD candidate in his research project and report on this in semiannual evaluations.
• Support the PhD candidate in developing necessary contacts and in working actively in the world of research.
• Provide supervision regularly, read and discuss the candidate’s work, and suggest needed corrections in the research and the writing process.
• Guide the PhD candidate in his efforts to publish research results in the course of the PhD Program.

c) THE PhD CANDIDATE’S RESPONSIBILITIES:
i. Keeping his/her supervisor informed of the progress in his research, including:

• All relevant information concerning the progress of the PhD Program and work on the dissertation.
• All the drafts of the gradual phases in writing the dissertation.
• All important research results.
• The process of the editing of the final text of the dissertation.
• Drafts of any publication during the PhD study period.

ii. Applying all corrections requested by his/her supervisor.
iii. Participating actively in academic conferences and workshops during the period of his/her doctoral study.
d) SEMI-ANNUAL EVALUATIONS:
Every six months, the supervisor provides the Dean, as director of the PhD Program, with an evaluation of the candidate’s academic progress and research. Based on the evaluation, the Dean decides whether the candidate’s academic progress and research are satisfactory or not.
The PhD candidate who fails to secure an approval of his/her detailed dissertation proposal, within the 3 semesters that follow his/her enrollment, is placed on academic probation.

e) THE DISSERTATION COMMITTEE:
The two readers must be professors or associate professors from the main field of specialization at UOB. The task of the Committee is to read the dissertation final draft and provide feedback including remarks and required amendments before the submission to defense.

f) CHANGE OF SUPERVISOR:
The supervisor may be changed in the course of a PhD Program, or co-supervisors may be appointed. A request for a change of supervisor may come from the PhD candidate or from the supervisor, or may be initiated by the Dean.

4. THE FORMAT OF THE PhD DISSERTATION
Candidates must follow the PhD Dissertation Guide and Style Manual issued by the Central Library at UOB.

5. THE ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE

a) APPOINTMENT OF THE COMMITTEE
Upon completion of the PhD dissertation, the candidate submits by hand to the Dean seven copies of the manuscript and applies in writing for the dissertation defense. The Dean approves the candidate’s application, appoints the Assessment Committee members and designates the committee chairperson.

b) COMPOSITION:
The Assessment Committee consists of at least 5 members: the supervisor, the members of the dissertation committee, including a professor or an associate professor from another university. The Dissertation Supervisor may not chair the assessment committee.

c) TASKS:
The Assessment Committee is in charge of reading and examining the final text of the dissertation. Members of the Assessment Committee receive a hard copy of the dissertation sent by the Dean. They shall:

- Submit a written Report on the Dissertation to the Dean two months after they receive the manuscript. All reports shall be available at the Office of the Dean before the public announcement of the defense session.
- Attend the defense session personally and present their evaluation orally during the session.
- Deliberate and agree on a grading mark for the dissertation.

The Program Director is responsible for ensuring the examination procedures: submission of copies to the assessment committee, communicating the date of defense, coordination of the session and submission of all needed reports and documents.

d) DEFENSE:
The PhD candidate defends the dissertation before the assessment committee according to the following procedures:

- The date for the defense session is set by the Dean.
• The physical presence of the candidate at the defense is required.
• The defense is open to the public.
• The Dissertation is graded with a pass/fail assessment.
• The chairperson writes down the session report.
• The final session report is signed by all members present in the defense.

6. AWARD OF THE PhD
The PhD degree is the highest academic degree awarded at the Institute of Theology to candidates who have completed the required coursework, participated in at least two international conferences, published at least one article in a peer-reviewed academic review, defended a doctoral dissertation, and submitted it by hand to the Library after making the requested amendments.
Candidates are eligible to receive the PhD degree when they offer by hand to the Dean’s office the following documents:
• Certificates of participation in at least two national or international conferences.
• A copy of their publication in a peer-reviewed academic journal.
• A copy of the Dissertation after the final amendments, signed by the five members of the Assessment Committee.
• A Library receipt of the Dissertation.
After reviewing the above-mentioned documents, the Dean of the Institute of Theology approves the award of PhD to the Candidate. The University of Balamand solemnly awards the degree of PhD.

COURSE DESCRIPTION

THEO 610 INTERTEXTUALITY IN ACTS
Credits: 3
One of the most relevant issues in the history of Biblical interpretation is the use of the Old Testament by the New Testament authors. Lately, several theories of literary intertextuality have given way to revisit this question with new methods and procedures. Early in the 70’ and 80’, scholars like Julia Kristeva and Roland Barthes affirmed that every text is intertextual as they are in debt to the former written treasure, even if authors did not quote them explicitly. Later in the 90’, Gérard Genette developed a theory of intertextuality that helped and helps biblical scholars to deal methodologically with this significant topic.
The present seminar works on the second volume of the Lucan Diptych, a text that bases its contents in the prophecies and narratives of the Old Testament, particularly as rendered in the Septuagint version. During the sessions and the research work, students learn to use this methodology to extend their knowledge on the Book of Acts and rediscover the treasures of its theological approach to the first decades of the Christian Kerygma’s expansion in the Greek-Roman world.

THEO 611 THE NEW TESTAMENT ARABIC TEXT IN ANTIOCHIAN MANUSCRIPTS
Credits: 3
The Antiochian manuscript collections cover a wide range of New Testament translations into Arabic. The first part of this seminar introduces participants into the time, types, categories and families of N.T. Arabic Manuscripts, as well as into a history of research on this issue. In the second part of the seminar, students work on the questions of the Greek Source and on the importance of lectionaries and whole New Testament publications in the Ottoman time. This seminar aims to encourage students to write their PhD dissertation in this field.
THEO 612 BIBLICAL APOCRYPHA AND PSEUDEPIGRAPHA IN EASTERN ORTHODOXY

Credits: 3

The books considered by scholars as Biblical Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha have played an important role in the genesis of liturgical texts and celebrations, as some of them belong to the canon of the Orthodox Old Testament. In this seminar, students work on the interpretation of some relevant texts and analyze the intensity and importance of their presence in liturgy. Special focus is given to the Arabic manuscripts available in the region.

THEO 613 THE DEBATE ABOUT THE GENUINENESS OF SOME PAULINE LETTERS

Credits: 3

This course presents the arguments and the counter arguments about the genuineness of the following Pauline Letters: Ephesians, Colossians, 2 Thessalonians, 1 & 2 Timothy, Titus, and Hebrews. This issue is of great significance, not only because it weighs in studying the historical environment of these Letters, and their true authorship and objectives, but also in view of the fact that the consequences extend beyond the historical information to touch two theological levels:

1. Accepting the teaching in these Letters as normative in studying the thought and style of St Paul;
2. Taking into consideration the content of these Letters in defining Christian tenets.

The issue of genuineness of the above-mentioned New Testament Letters became a timely subject in the last years, since it is seriously reconsidered. Even the German consensus on rejecting the genuineness of these Letters started to fall down. The revision of this position tickles the interest in investigating the positions of the Church Fathers and Writers, as well as of Eastern exegetes in modern time, on the genuineness of these Letters.

THEO 614 THE NEW PERSPECTIVE ON PAUL QUESTIONED

Credits: 3

The epithet “the New Perspective” on Paul, or rather “New Perspectives” - as it is often noted that the singular title gives an unjustified impression of unity - designates a field of study in which many scholars are actively pursuing research and continuously revising their own theories, holding in common the belief that the historic perspectives of Paul the Apostle and Judaism are fundamentally incorrect. “The validity of the Sinaitic Law”, “human effort and good works”, “Pistis Christou”, “Grace”, “the atonement”, are some central issues discussed by the “New Perspective”.

This course investigates the positions of the scholars who embraced the “New Perspective” on Paul, and discusses them exegetically, comparing them to the “Patristic and modern Orthodox perspective”, as well as to the “Old Perspective” (Lutheran and Reformed”), in order to draw conclusions on the validity of the various interpretations.

THEO 615 ANALYZING THE USE OF VERBS IN ARABIC GOSPEL TRANSLATIONS

Credits: 3

In this course, the PhD candidate researches the use of the passive form in the Greek New Testament. The participant shall consult grammar and linguistic studies and articles related to this issue and then do a parallel research work related to Modern Arabic. The purpose of this course is to compare the grammatical and style differences in both languages and to develop a theory of translation for this particular type of verbal use. Throughout this course, special consideration will be given to the history of translating the Gospels into Arabic.

THEO 620 MODERN TRENDS IN OLD TESTAMENT HERMENEUTICS

Credits: 3

No other area of biblical studies is changing as rapidly as hermeneutics. With the addition of studies based on rhetorical, literary-structural, semiotic, social, scientific, and special interest approaches, it is impossible to keep up with the literature in this field. This course attempts to offer to the students an introduction as well as assessment of Old Testament hermeneutical methods which prevailed in modern times until today, starting with the diachronic, or the so-called atomist school, and covering later developments such as the literary approaches embodied in rhetorical, narrative and redaction criticism as well as in intertextual, discourse and linguistic/semiotic analysis. Other modern analytical tools such as the social scientific and the reader response tool are also analyzed and assessed. This course is given as a seminar. Students have to learn and apply these methods on selected texts of the Old Testament with the view of enabling them to evaluate the validity and the relevance of each of them for their exegetical work.

THEO 621 THE OLD TESTAMENT IN THE MODERN MIDDLE EASTERN CONTEXT
Credits: 3

There is no doubt that the Old Testament has a central position in the discussions revolving around the turmoil caused by the rise of the State of Israel in the middle of the twentieth century. Ideologies either supporting or rejecting this political event have expressed themselves in a way or another vis-à-vis the Old Testament. Western approaches (ranging from moderate to extremist views) supporting the “right of the Jews” in having Palestine as their homeland, have read Old Testament texts in such a way that this right may be legitimized. On the opposite side, one observes various aspects of Marcionism in Middle Eastern Christian circles, which can be explained as a reaction to the first position. This seminar discusses these views, their history and application and how they affected the use of the Old Testament as well as how it is viewed in the Middle East. The study is based on representative texts from different authors.

THEO 630 DEIFICATION IN THE EASTERN CHRISTIAN TRADITION
Credits: 3

The seminar is an analytical attempt to explore and survey the religious, social and cultural components which contributed to the evolution of the concept of theosis throughout the history of Eastern Christian Theology. It examines primary sources, whether historical or patristic, and focuses on the making of terminology and the theological language related to this issue. The seminar also treats the major trends of reception of the concept of deification in the contemporary Orthodox theological context underlining its crucial role in the articulation of the Orthodox identity of Theology and Orthodox witness in the modern world, as well as its diachronic influence on the ethos of Eastern Theology as reflected in sacred art, liturgical forms and religious sensitivity in general.

THEO 631 MAJOR TRENDS AND FIGURES IN CONTEMPORARY ORTHODOX THEOLOGY
Credits: 3

The seminar sheds light on the major centers of theological production in the contemporary Orthodox world and the circumstances of their creation and growth. It is an appraisal of the contribution of the theological schools and trends, as well as the prominent personalities, which contributed to the expression of Orthodox theology since the second half of the nineteenth century. It addresses the historical, cultural and socio-political backgrounds which shaped contemporary theological patterns and concentrates on the theological works and the scholarly efforts which engaged in the task of analyzing and criticizing the history of theological thought of this period. The seminar also analyzes the main problems and challenges in addition to the major intellectual theological topics which directed the dynamism of theological thinking and writing in the age of modernity.

THEO 632 THE PATRISTIC ANTHROPOLOGY OF FR. JOHN ROMANIDES
Credits: 3

This seminar explores the theological thought of Fr. John Romanides, with a particular emphasis placed on themes in his writings related to Christian anthropology. Special attention is given to the biblical and patristic basis of his work on creation, the fall of man, and salvation in Christ—topics that opened a unique door for Orthodox theology in the 20th century, changing the focus and direction of theological thinking and teaching in the post-WWII era. The seminar also examines Fr. Romanides’ contributions toward reviving patristic theology in our times.
THEO 633 DEBATES ON THE NATURE AND THE MISSION OF THE CHURCH IN THE 20TH AND 21ST CENTURIES Credits: 3
The richness of the contribution of Eastern Christian theologians in the nineteenth century and in the decades preceding the Second Vatican Council as well as their role in the foundation of the World Council of Churches led to a remarkable affluence in ecclesiological studies in Orthodox theological circles and in Ecumenical dialogues. This seminar aims at analyzing the dynamics of ecclesiological thought during the course of the 20th century and in the dawn of our 21st century.

THEO 634 THE CONTRIBUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ANTIOCH TO CONTEMPORARY ECUMENICAL DIALOGUES Credits: 3
The active role of the Antiochian church in bilateral and multilateral dialogues between Christians in the 20th and the 21st centuries as well as her presence in numerous ecumenical encounters, podiums and councils have been a genuine expression of the Antiochian belief in dialogue as a method of rapprochement. This seminar sheds light on the contribution of the church of Antioch in Ecumenical dialogues and tries to evaluate the strategies, the methods and the outcomes of this commitment.

THEO 635 HESYCHASM AND THE HERMENEUTICS OF CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE Credits: 3
Hesychasm, the renaissance in Eastern Christian spirituality and theology one century before the great captivity of Constantinople expressed in rich literary, artistic and liturgical production as well as in the flourishing of monasticism, in addition to the hesychastic controversy and its influence on the future of Christian theology, paved the way to enormous historical and theological questions which still need consideration. The Seminar attempts to assess the role of Hesychasm, as a hermeneutical method, in shaping and orienting the articulation of Eastern Christian Dogmatology.

THEO 640 ORTHODOX CHURCHES DURING THE OTTOMAN PERIOD Credits: 3
This seminar helps Post Graduate Students – PhD candidates – to analyze the situation of the Roum Orthodox communities under the Ottoman millet system as a persecuted community or a privileged community. What was supposed to be the apocalyptic end of the world had witnessed an important demographical progress of Roum Orthodox population. During four hundred years, the Roum Orthodox lived what is so called as the “Greek Enlightenment Century”. Through some of the Antiochian manuscripts, students analyze the different cultural currents of this era.

This course investigates the relations between the four historical patriarchates and studies their relations with other churches such as Russia, Georgia and Romania.

The students learn through reviewing diplomatic reports about the Russian protection and its limits, and through archives about the impact of Ottoman Reforms and their influence on the lay councils on the life of the Church.

THEO 641 THE CONTEMPORARY SITUATION OF THE ORTHODOX CHURCH IN THE WORLD Credits: 3
This seminar studies the different situations of Orthodox communities during the twentieth century and analyzes the different positive and negative issues experienced by the different churches such as:

- Persecution through forbidding religion in Russia and population transfer in Cilicia and Anatolia.
- Relations between Churches and states: Greece and Russia.
- Interaction between national identity and religious denominations: Serbia, Russia.
- Christian Ecumenism and interfaction dialogue.
- The role of Orthodox Diaspora in the elaboration of a new theology: France, U.S.A. and others.
- Internal problems and conflicts.
- Survival and Renewal.
Through those different cases, students learn how to cope with challenges of entering in modernity and preserving Tradition by emphasizing on the Antiochian experience. They also learn from the behavior of the Church during economic and political crises.

THEO 642 CHRISTIAN MUSLIM DIALOGUE DURING THE OTTOMAN EMPIRE

Credits: 3

The course is an analysis of the impact of Ottoman institutions, e.g. Janissaries, Timar on Christian communities. Controversial Ottoman reforms, e.g. Capitulations, Tanzimat, regarded, by Muslims, as favorable to Christians, resulting in the deterioration of good neighborhood. The end of this period and the collapse of the empire led to discriminations and massacres against Christians. Concepts such as Ra’aya, Miri, Citizenship, Badal askariyah … are also studied.

THEO 643 CHRISTIAN MUSLIM RELATION DURING THE CLASSICAL PERIOD

Credits: 3

This course is a survey of Christian-Muslim relations during the different Islamic dynasties and analysis of the impact of external relations with e.g. Byzantines, Mongols, on the demographical and social situations of Christians, from their participation in political and cultural life during the Arabic golden ages to their marginalization after the Crusaders wars. Topics also include the study of related issues, e.g. Ahl al Kitab, Ahl al dhimmat, Kharaj, Giziyat, separate living quarters.

THEO 644 READING AND EDITING MANUSCRIPTS ARCHIVES AND INSCRIPTIONS

Credits: 3

The course aims at initiating students to read different scriptures and to learn methodologies of cataloguing manuscripts, archiving documents and analyzing inscriptions. Measures for editing ancient documents, understanding ancient texts and vocabulary, historical and geographical background, would be essential to make those ancient manuscripts well known by scholars.

THEO 645 THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN ANTIOCHIAN AND EASTERN ORTHODOX CHURCHES

Credits: 3

This course aims at identifying, documenting and analyzing the key characteristics of the relationship between the Antiochian Orthodox Church and the Eastern Orthodox Churches. It adopts a hybrid approach with thematic and chronological features. The mutual contributions to different facets of Church life are given specific consideration.

THEO 650 THE MYSTERY OF SALVATION IN ANTIOCHIAN LITERATURE

Credits: 3

Antiochian School of Exegesis paved the way to the flourishing of a peculiar Antiochian Christological teaching with many repercussions on Soteriology. Antiochian Soteriology is characterized by a specific affirmation of the reality of divine Incarnation, of the complementarity of the human nature assumed by the Logos of God, the meaning of the presence of Christ in human history and the eschatological consequences of these teachings. These specificities render the textual analysis of the Antiochian Soteriology an insightful aim of this seminar.

THEO 651 CHURCH FATHERS AND POLITICAL AUTHORITY

Credits: 3

In the times of persecution, when early Christian writings contrasted the Reign of God with the Reign of Caesar, the answer was martyrdom. But after the Edict of Milan and the Christianization of the Roman Empire by Constantine the Great and his successors, the divine authority of political rulers as well as the tendency of some hierarchs to reclaim authority in secular matters led many church Fathers to devote writings to confront problematic positions related to issues of authority. The seminar surveys patristic literature on the relation between the church and political authority drawing important conclusions useful for the present needs of churches in our contemporary societies.

THEO 652 THE KNOWLEDGE OF GOD IN EASTERN PATRISTIC THOUGHT
Credits: 3
The relation between secular knowledge and divine knowledge has been a crucial problem facing Christian theology since the attempts of Saint Paul and the first Apostolic and Apologetic Church Fathers. Origen in his defense of Christian faith Against Celsius, Saint Irenaeus of Lyon, as well as the Cappadocian Fathers confronting Eunomius, have set the premises for the specific Eastern patristic approach to this thorny issue. The seminar explores the course of thought in Eastern Christianity until our present day, with an enriching comparison with Scholasticism which became the landmark in Western Christendom.

THEO 653 PRAYER IN EASTERN PATRISTIC SPIRITUALITY
Credits: 3
The rich corpus of literature dealing with the meaning and methods of prayer and its aims and fruits grant Eastern Christianity a peculiar spiritual sense and orientation throughout the many centuries of its turbulent history. This seminar attempts to survey the different trends of prayer in Eastern Christianity and their synthesis articulated in the well-known recension of Nikodemus the Athonite and Makarios Bishop of Corinth, i.e. The Philokalia, as well as their reception in contemporary Eastern monasticism and the life of the Church at large.

THEO 663 HISTORY OF THE ANTIOCHIAN CHURCH UNDER THE OTTOMAN EMPIRE
The students analyze the situation of the Greek Orthodox of Antioch in the first two centuries where the new structures were imposed. In spite of their difficulties, they succeeded to be an elite in the main cities of the Syrian Provinces. As main traders and well educated, they served as secretaries, treasurers and main farmers of taxes for the governors.

During the last two centuries, the church had to face the schism of the Uniates Greek Catholic and the proselytism of the Protestant and Catholic missions. The reforms of the Ottoman Empire introduce a new era of equality between Muslims and Christians as Ottoman citizens. The reforms which introduce lay councils in the administration of the church and the Russian schools bring the Antiochian Orthodox to arabize their church by electing an Arab patriarch.

THEO 680 ETHICAL APPROACHES TO MARRIAGE AND FAMILY ISSUES
Credits: 3
This course will explore recent scholarship in the theology of marriage and postmodern thought, bringing theology into conversation with postmodern scientific challenges. Students will read essential theological documents on ethical issues related to marriage. Among the questions we will explore: what temporalities are embedded within various theological texts and rendered problematic by contemporary challenges of richly diverse cultures? How can we critically evaluate these documents in light of postmodern debates on family-related ethical issues? How might we get at the issues that these postmodern concepts raised for theologians? What could be the approaches of Christian theology on bioethical dilemmas, its positions on contemporary social issues, its teaching on human relationships, and the meaning it gives to life and death? The course will provide an opportunity for students to bring these questions to bear on their own academic and pastoral work, while examining the depth of the connection between faith and life.

THEO 681 PRIESTHOOD AND CHALLENGES IN SPIRITUAL DIRECTION
Credits: 3
This course aims to provide students with a framework for understanding difficult issues related to spiritual direction of lives of Christians confronted in the practice of Priesthood. It focuses on contemporary challenges in the sacraments of priesthood, especially related to confession and spiritual guidance. The course will be divided into three parts: Part I will read early patristic texts on the priesthood written by Ambrose of Milan, Gregory the Theologian, John Chrysostom, Basil the Great, and Gregory the Great. Students will identify important persons, events, and schools of thought that contributed to the formation of early priesthood models and methods of spiritual direction. Part II will turn to canonical and pastoral issues challenging the work of priesthood throughout history and the large variety that exists in the practice of confession. Part III discusses how the ministry of priesthood and the practice of confession can be approached in our modern world.

THEO 697 MODERN AND POSTMODERN PHILOSOPHY

This doctoral seminar aims to read and discuss several modern and postmodern philosophical texts. Because Postmodernism is a reaction to and rejection of certain tendencies of Modernity, the seminar starts with an overview of selected texts dealing with early modern rationalists and empiricists (Descartes, Hume, Kant, Hegel, etc.). In its second part, the seminar turns to the study of the critique of modern philosophy’s discourses as it appears in the texts of Kierkegaard and Nietzsche pointing in different ways toward postmodern thought. “French Theory” as it appears in the works of Foucault, Deleuze, Derrida and Lyotard, etc., and their radical critique of reason are studied in depth through representative texts.
